

BCC does not comment on Lib Dem MEPs disgusting slogan

The BBC's main news was quick to poke criticism at Brexit MEPs for turning their backs on the Euro anthem but failed to mention that it is the anthem of a political group, not that of a country!

Britain has a National Anthem which is not expected to be played in another country. Why should any British MEP show any form of allegiance to another country's political leanings?

When involved in politics, either local or national, it soon becomes clear why the BBC richly earns its nickname – The Brussels Broadcasting Corporation. It seems Auntie Beeb pays rather close attention to the EU Media Grant system and is eager to comply. Whilst the EU Parliament's cameras were focussed on the Lib Dem contingent exploiting their yellow T shirts, BBC News uttered not one word against them for the grossly offensive B.....to Brexit slogan on their backs.

Whilst it would have been a gesture of good will to appear as smartly dressed as the other MEPs, rather than displaying such appalling lack of dress-sense, could those ill-liberal un-democratic MEPs possibly dream up a more disgraceful and insulting way to behave by turning their backs on the British people to sport such a slogan in the way they did, thereby putting two fingers up to the democratic decision of 23rd June 2016?

It's clear that some of our recently elected MEPs need to be reminded that they are in Brussels and Strasbourg to represent us, not the EU!

Roll on 31st October so we can get started on what should have been initiated over three years ago.
