

Italy upsets the EU

Again the EU reveals its true nature when voters in Italy were deemed to have given the 'wrong' result.

The democratic process and wishes of Italians were defied and a puppet put in place. Another major democracy sees a legitimate vote dismissed and swept aside because the EU can't cope with dissent – exactly why we voted Leave in the 2016 Referendum i.e. to take back control.

The EU elite dare not countenance dissent as their crumbling 'grand' EU project implodes. The Euro has brought poverty to millions of people, many now devoid of hope, and caused divisions right across the continent.

The Italian Five Star and the League agreed the framework for a coalition government and all seemed to be going well. Both parties agreed Giuseppe Conte for the new Prime Minister.

But Brussels drew the line at the proposal finance minister as he was not 'EU and the Eurozone' sympathetic enough. Concerns were floated that Italy, where unemployment blights the lives of a third of young people, might exit the Euro currency.

Carlo Cottarelli or 'Mr Scissors', as he is known in Italy was pushed forward. Why? He was candidate of the IMF and reviled for his loyalty to the EU and its advocacy of austerity economics.

So the Italians may have to return to the polls to engage again in the charade of voting in order to appoint a charade of a government. Brussels has its own clear view on the "ill-disciplined, un-reformable" Italian electorate.

Fans of mafia bluster might be familiar with this type of talk. "Awfully nice country you've got here. Shame if anything happened to it".

Stuart
St. Ives

ukipstives@gmail.com